Fashion fund-raiser hits the catwalk

By Carla Flores
Mustang Daily

The Society of Black Engineers and Scientists is preparing the catwalk for a spring fund-raising fashion show on March 6.

Clothing from more than 30 local stores including Avanti, Express, Structure and Gap will be modeled at the show. According to Shawn Immerman, associate manager of Gap, the store will be modeling its second group of the spring line, which includes new spring colors and merchandise.

"The Gap is always eager to participate in the community and with Cal Poly to promote the Gap brand's quality line of clothing," Immerman said.

The purpose of the fashion show is to raise enough money to allow the club to attend the National Society of Black Engineers' Conference in Kansas City.

The annual one-week conference will be held in March and includes workshops, a career fair and internship opportunities for the members.

According to Pamela Larde, event coordinator for the Society of Black Engineers and Scientists, the group's goal is to sell at least 200 tickets and put on an event that everyone can appreciate.

Tickets for the fashion show are $18 for students and $20 for the general public. They can be purchased at the Multicultural Center and in the University Union on Thursdays.

Emergency lights put in on campus

Cal Poly students may feel safer walking on campus soon, thanks to nine new emergency flashing lights with direct phone lines to Public Safety. The lights are scheduled to be operational today. One is already installed behind the red brick dorms.

Table manners, Mustangs-style

More than fifty well-dressed Cal Poly students clutched a goblet of sparkling Martinelli's cider or mountain spring water and entered the University Union gallery to learn the art of proper business etiquette.

Last Wednesday, Carly Baker, wife of president Warren Baker, spoke to this snazzy group of students on how to take the business world by storm — with good table manners.

With no name tags provided to them, students were left to mingle and mix for the first half hour of the evening. Campus Dining attendants scattered throughout the gallery to serve appetizers of mixed bruschetta on French bread toast and salmon mousse on cucumbers.

Broncos dominate Atlanta in 34-19 victory

Elway remains uncertain about retirement plans

MIAMI (AP) — What a perfect way for John Elway to say goodbye.

The man who spent his first 14 NFL seasons without a Super Bowl ring got his second straight Sunday, weaving his magic for what could be the final time and gaining revenge on former coach and adversary Dan Reeves and his upstart Atlanta Falcons.

The final score was 34-19 over an Atlanta team that was its own worst enemy as the 38-year-old Elway, who was the unanimous choice for MVP, completed 18 of 29 passes for 336 yards and one touchdown and ran 3 yards for another score. The total yardage was third best in Super Bowl history.

Elway refused to say whether he would retire or come back for a chance to win a third straight Super Bowl.

"I'm going to take some time, relish this year," he said. "You got to love those challenges. ... We got the nucleus here to do it. It definitely throws a kink into my thinking."

In addition to the Falcons, who did everything they could to self-destruct on offense, Elway's accomplices were: ■ Darrien Gordon, who intercepted two passes that set up two scores and set a Super Bowl record with 108 yards in interception returns.

■ Terrell Davis, the league MVP, who carried 25 times for 102 yards for his seventh consecutive postseason 100-yard game, breaking an NFL record set by John Riggins.

■ Wide receiver Rod Smith, who caught five passes for 152 yards and an 80-yard touchdown.

Despite the absence of tight end Shannon Sharpe, who injured a knee, Smith and the other Denver receivers consistently burned Atlanta's defense.

MVP: Kim Abbananto, a bartender at Madison's in downtown San Luis Obispo, wears John Elway's No. 7 to celebrate the Broncos' Super Bowl victory Sunday evening.

Poly Plan survey to be released Tuesday

Students encouraged to e-mail suggestions and questions to Associated Students Inc.

By Nate Pontious
Mustang Daily

The last chance for Cal Poly students to affect the Poly Plan survey is today.

Associated Students Inc. representatives were scheduled with steering committee staff members this morning to finalize the set of questions about the proposed academic fee increase. The questionnaire is an addendum to the Student Needs and Priorities Survey (SNAPS).

If the latest phase of the plan is approved, tuition will be increased by $135 this fall quarter, and then by $180 per quarter the following year. This will boost total revenue from the academic fee from $2.3 million to $9.2 million annually.

The results of the survey will not be the only deciding factor in the Poly Plan decision Feb. 12.

"It's kind of like putting together a mosaic, and every data input will be looked upon in the total picture, and not one item ... is going to outweigh the others," said Vice President of Student Affairs Juan Gonzalez.

Questions for the new survey emphasize changes within the individual student's college and department, including questions that ask students to rate the importance of "Accelerating YOUR progress towards graduation and degree completion," and "Increasing the availability of classes in YOUR MAJOR." The second part of the survey asks the student to rate his or her knowledge about the Cal Poly Plan.

ASI representative Samuel Aborne encourages students to submit suggestions for survey questions. ASI representative will be taking into consideration all e-mail submitted to polyplan@asi.calpoly.edu before finalizing the survey today.

Even though Cal Poly President

Warren Baker has the power to override the committee's decision in March, the student body has veto power, according to Gonzalez.

"The students have never been overridden," he said.

The next steering committee meeting will be held Feb. 5 at 10 a.m. in University Union room 204. The agenda will involve the deans from each of Cal Poly's seven colleges and a progress update on the student informational forums. The forums are another aspect of educating the student body and getting feedback on the proposed fee increases, part of a process termed alternative consultation.

Amy Luker, ASI board of directors chair, stressed the importance of having both the survey and informational forums.

"Every dean, every professor is going to be in favor of the plan, because they see the good things they can do with the Plan," Luker said. "We want the students to be able to say that they want the increase without a dean standing in the back of the room."

Poly student assaulted

Male student was shoved to ground and kicked after trip to VGs

By Rachel Robertshaw
Mustang Daily

A Cal Poly student was assaulted when he and his friend were heading back to their dorms Wednesday.

According to police, two male students left the Vista Grande Cafe at about 10:15 p.m. with a backpack full of food. After they had crossed the street, a white male shoved one of the students from behind. The suspect then hit the victim on the neck several times. When the student fell to the ground, the suspect continued to kick him, police say.

Apparently, the second male attempted to intervene, but a second suspect warned him to stay out of it. The students fled from the area, and called police.

Officer Lori Hashim was dispatched to Muir Hall to meet with the two students.

Cal Poly Police Investigator Ray Berrett said, "They were just two males out getting a snack and they were attacked. But they did the right thing."

The names of the students who were involved in the assault were kept confidential by police.

word "Emergency," stenciled in bright blue on the side. They include a speakerphone-like device that connects directly to Public Safety when a red button is pushed. A blue light also flashes.

"One advantage is that the phones are easier to see than the older yellow emergency boxes," said Vicki Stover, associate vice president for administration. "Another is that the unit designates (to Public Safety) where it is."

The nine lights will be located throughout campus. One will be in the parking lot across from the Yosemite halls. One will be on the track field; one by the football stadium on California Street; another across from the library in the parking lot; one on the bridge to the upper parking lots behind the library; one near the new poultry unit; one near the ornamental horticulture/horse unit; another light will be installed in Poly Canyon.

The project was a joint effort between Public Safety, Information Technology Services and Facility Services. These groups decided the locations for the lights.

The funding for the emergency units depended on their locations. If they are located in parking lots, they were paid for by the Parking Fund, generated from the sale of parking permits. The rest were paid for out of Cal Poly's General Fund, said Debbie Brothwell, associate director of finance.

The project became possible when Cal Poly negotiated its new phone contract about a year ago. New equipment (including the lights) was included, along with the capability to make the system work.

"Our anticipated completion date is today," Stover said. "First, we need to get a better map (showing the locations) and check to make sure they are totally installed. We are looking forward to having them, and we will get the information out to as many people as possible."

Most Cal Poly students approve of the new emergency system.

"It's a good idea," said Christina Smith, a business freshman. "Especially if you're walking alone — it makes you feel safer."

Business senior Colleen Mitchell said, "It doesn't make me feel safer. We need better lighting everywhere, not just in the parking lots."

"It's a great idea and should have been done a long time ago," said Susanne Kelley, a business senior. "It's great that it's directly connected, but what if it's a serious situation? You're still vulnerable until (police) get there."

business introduction," said Rick Johnson, associate executive director for Associated Students Inc. "You have about 15 minutes to make a first impression ... creating a connection with people to last a lifetime."

Students were not given name tags on purpose, Johnson said. The hope was they would mingle with each other and introduce themselves. A lot of students did just that, but Johnson found a lot of students were intrigued with the maps and graphs hanging on the gallery walls.

Students may feel awkward and out of place in business attire. Not to worry, Johnson said — they will grow into feeling more comfortable.

"We are talking about success in your career, success in your life. Spend some time with it," he told students during the presentation.

According to Johnson, the most important things to remember during business introductions are body language, a firm handshake, eye contact and a smile.

Baker was the main speaker of the evening. She addressed what some consider the scariest part of any business dinner: how to eat without spilling food and how to pick the proper utensils during the meal.

"When we get to the silverware, things become just a little more emotional," Baker said. "Always go from the outside in. If you make a mistake, pretend it didn't happen and move on."

For psychology graduate student Patricia Fernandez, a lesson in silverware was beneficial.

"To tell the truth, I don't know how to use my silverware," Fernandez said. "I think it's good to know appropriate manners."

If anyone made a mistake and went the wrong way in utensil grabbing or bread passing, it could mess up the whole table, Baker warned before she proclaimed the official start of the evening: "Let the games begin!"

Materials engineering senior Geoff Rogers made a suggestion to the other students at his table when the first course of butternut squash soup arrived: "It's best to watch how other people do things. Then you can start mimicking them."

Rogers was one of the first to sign up for the dinner after reading about it on the career services web page. He learned a lot of his formal etiquette when he went on a cruise with his grandparents last summer.

Mirroring the reason why a lot of other students signed up to attend the banquet, Rogers planned to use the evening to practice his skills and to get better.

"Why are we in school?" Rogers asked. "To learn."

Eric Esteban, an industrial technology senior, heard about the dinner from a friend. Esteban said he wanted to perfect his business etiquette before attending "An Evening with the Industry," an event put on by the Society of Women Engineers.

"Parents don't give you formal etiquette lessons," he said. "I think this dinner is a great idea. It's a good start ... How else would I learn?"

Baker gave a few dos and don'ts of the dinner table while students were eating the main dish of cornmeal-crusted salmon and lemon-garlic linguine.

Appearance is as important as performance, Baker said. Students should remember to sit up straight, keep their elbows off the table and never let utensils touch the table again after using them with food.

"Calling attention to the dining mistakes of others is a greater offense than anything you can do with a fork," Baker said.

The presentation also consisted of a segment on proper business attire, with two students modeling acceptable interview outfits.

"If it takes 15 seconds to make a first impression, it takes three seconds for people to decide if they like what you are wearing," said Lynn James, manager for Patrick James, a San Luis Obispo clothing store.

"Think of buying a suit as buying a job," she said. "How much is that job worth to you?"

The power suit, James emphasized, is the best thing to wear to an interview. A power suit is a dark suit — charcoal or navy, but never black.

Guests at the head table and the students in the audience shared conversations and participated with each other. Never would a segment of the presentation go by without a question from an audience member.

Career services hopes to sponsor etiquette lessons once a quarter from now on, said Jane Johnson, career counselor. Future etiquette presentations will be a modified version of the banquet, done without the fine dining.

The worst thing on television is not the impeachment trial

What is the worst show on television; the one that degrades our society in the most insidious fashion? Is it a cartoon parody about life in the projects? Perhaps it is MTV's "House of Style?" Or maybe the worst evil can be seen in the impeachment trial coverage, which shows us that justice is only defined in terms of political parties. These are all good answers, but none of these television calamities reaches anywhere near the level of depravity found in the chair throwing, obscenity bleeping, fat jiggling, insanity promulgating antics of "The Jerry Springer Show."

Are you obese, foul mouthed, perverted, cheating trailer trash from the swamps of the Mississippi? Then you too can have your hour of fame on "The Jerry Springer Show!" You and a guest will fly round trip to New York City where you can share — on national television — your sordid love triangle with your step-sister and your pet sheep. But wait, that's not all! For no extra charge you and your guest can fling fists, furniture and foul words at each other while being restrained by ten of the most sexy ex-pro wrestler security guards!

While "The Jerry Springer Show" may be a dream come true for those who are wacko enough to make it on the show, the broadcast of their misadventures has a profoundly negative effect on society. First of all, these "people" should be locked up, not given airtime. Second of all, if you watch "The Jerry Springer Show," you may be unwittingly warping your brain into believing that the world is made up of racist, alcoholic necrophiliacs with an IQ of 55. This misconceived notion may be enough to drive you hermetic, or worse, to make your own indiscretions seem almost angelic. I bet Bill Clinton used to watch "The Jerry Springer Show," and he is thinking: "What's a little oral adultery compared with being a cross-dressing, pedophilic prostitute?"

"The Jerry Springer Show" parades the very worst of humanity for all to see. It lowers our standards of morality by letting us compare ourselves to the basest individuals in society. It fosters mistrust and paranoia by focusing on the wretched, and therefore increasing their presence in our minds. It makes people from other countries think that all Americans are emotionally unstable.

The thing that upsets me the most about "The Jerry Springer Show" is that Americans continue to diligently watch, some even buy the home videos so they can see the mayhem without censorship. Perhaps watching "The Jerry Springer Show" makes one's own life seem serene and traditional.

Every time we tune into "The Jerry Springer Show," we give our tacit approval of all that should be rejected and abhorred. Only when people stop watching the show will we rid ourselves of the worst smut on television. For the sake of our children and their children, let's make the world a little cleaner: recycle your cans and bottles, give a hoot, don't pollute and never, ever watch "The Jerry Springer Show."

Jamie Rudolph is a speech communication senior.

Deferred rush creates strong membership

Editor:

This letter is in response to "Greeks rush to avoid new restrictions," which ran Thursday, Jan. 28.

I am for deferred rush. Before members of the IFC stop reading and come looking for me, I would like to explain my position. I am a member of a coed service fraternity and we have already implemented deferred rush this year.

The National Constitution of our fraternity has recommended for years that we not initiate new students. In the past, we too were opposed to deferring rush. We believed our membership would go down because new freshmen (and even transfer students) would lose interest if they could not join their first quarter. We were wrong! Today we have a rush class that is almost twice as large as our past class average and our perspectives are wonderful.

Deferred rush does not mean fraternities/sororities cannot make themselves known to new students through community service, campus projects like dances or activities during homecoming week. Deferred rush simply means they cannot pressure new students into joining their fraternity/sorority during fall quarter. Some of us forget how lost we were during our first year at college. Wanting to take advantage of confused freshmen, just to fill a quota, is not a good argument against deferred rush. If freshmen still want to join a fraternity/sorority winter quarter, they will still "become strong leaders, hold offices and make big differences," but they will be even stronger members because they had time to consider the decision to join.

As for the complaint that other clubs were not taken into account when investigating alcohol incidences, I again agree with Cal Poly. I find it hard to believe that IEEE, Society of Women Engineers or the ornamental horticulture club drink like the members of a social fraternity/sorority. These clubs were not added into alcohol studies because they have a main academic or activity focus beyond social interests. The dorms may have drinking problems as well, but you can't stop freshmen from living near Poly their first quarter.

My final point is a direct criticism of the IFC. My fraternity was sent a petition to sign against deferred rush. This is the first interest the IFC has ever taken in my fraternity. We are never told when their meetings are or what they do, and we certainly weren't invited to participate in the halftime free-throw contest at men's basketball games. I have a feeling that the fraternities and sororities that are scared enough to send out this petition are the ones who rely on new student confusion to convince people to join right away. If you have a great group to join, you shouldn't worry about deferred rush because you will still be a great group to join winter quarter.

I apologize if I have angered people in social fraternities or sororities. Joining my fraternity was the best experience of my college career, but I do not feel deferred rush will change that fact. The views I have expressed are not the same views of all the members of my fraternity, but I for one am not signing the IFC's petition and I will discourage others in my group from doing so. I think fraternities and sororities should try having one winter rush as large as fall rush usually is (not a lot of small rushes throughout the year) and if they lose members or the groups suffer, then complain. I would have my best friend tell the fraternities and sororities of Cal Poly her life philosophy: "Don't knock it, 'til you try it."

Diana Elva Puig is an electrical engineering junior.

NFL Hall of Fame adds LT, Dickerson

MIAMI (AP) — In the end, the Lawrence Taylor debate was no debate at all.

The most dominant defensive player of his time was voted into the Pro Football Hall of Fame on Saturday, his first year of eligibility.

Joining him in the Class of 1999 were runningback Eric Dickerson, tight end Ozzie Newsome, and guards Tom Mack and Billy Shaw.

It was Taylor, however, whose candidacy dominated conversation and sparked debate throughout Super Bowl week.

Suspended once while he was playing and arrested twice on drug charges after he retired, he has struggled with off-the-field problems that left some voters uneasy with his candidacy.

Saturday's meeting lasted longer than usual, with the Taylor debate taking the most time. One voter characterized the discussion as non-contentious.

Unlike baseball, there is no "good citizenship" clause in the football hall's bylaws and when it was time to vote, he received the 80 percent necessary for election. With all 36 voters present, 29 were needed. There was no announcement on the final vote.

Taylor, filming an Oliver Stone movie in South Florida, issued a statement saying:

"I am humbled by being elected to the Pro Football Hall of Fame. As I have said, I feel like it is the ultimate reward for playing the game that I love so much and gave so much. I appreciate the debate and the consideration that was given to my nomination. Ultimately, this honor has to do with how I played the game.

Obviously, the majority of the committee felt the same way.

"It doesn't always come across, but I do appreciate the well wishes and concerns of my family, my friends, and my former teammates. It means a great deal to me; it truly does."

Taylor played 13 seasons at linebacker for the New York Giants. He was a three-time choice as Defensive Player of the Year, the NFL's most valuable player in 1986 and was selected for a record 10 consecutive Pro Bowls. He finished his career with 132.5 sacks, not including 9.5

recorded in 1981 before sacks became an official statistic.

Dickerson set a single-season rushing record of 2,105 yards in 1984 and wound up third on the career rushing list with 13,259.

Like Taylor, Dickerson was somewhat controversial, forcing a trade from the Los Angeles Rams to Indianapolis Colts in 1987 following a long holdout.

"In life, everything doesn't go like you planned," he said. "For me, there were ups and downs, but I know I was a good football player. I never said I was a great football player."

Dickerson said he thought his records would fall one day.

"Every year, it seems someone gets closer and closer," he said. "If someone breaks my records, I'll be happy for him."

Mack was an 11-time Pro Bowl choice when he played for the Rams and one of the best blocking guards of his generation. He played in 184 consecutive games, never missing one in his 13-year career, and was elected in his final year of eligibility.

Newsome, tops all tight ends in receptions with 662 catches for 7,980 yards and 47 touchdowns in 13 seasons with the Cleveland Browns. He had back-to-back 89-catch seasons in 1983 and 1984 and played in 197 consecutive games before moving into the team's front office.

He goes into the hall the same year that Cleveland, the only team he played for, returns to the NFL.

"Getting the opportunity to go in when the Browns are going back on the football field is a double whammy," he said. "It makes it more special for myself. I'm a Cleveland Brown. I wore that orange helmet."

second double-double in the last three games (13 rebounds). The Mustangs leading scorer, Bjorklund (18.9 points per game), also contributed 12 points.

"Everyone played great," Beeson said. "We did everything we were supposed to and hit a lot of our shots. It was fun," he said.

The backcourt of the Mustangs also did its part. The guards contributed 43 points on 14 of 24 shooting (58.3 percent).

"We're getting better production from the point guard spot with Jabbar (Washington) and Ben (Larson)," Schneider said. "We got 22 points and 7 steals, that's an excellent day out of your point guard position."

Not to mention the team-high 21 points that Wozniak put up from the shooting guard position.

Cal Poly now focuses its attention on a two-game roadtrip starting with the University of Pacific on Thursday, and ending at Long Beach State University. The Mustangs have proved they can win on the road, bringing a two-game road winning streak into Thursday's game.

"When you lose your confidence and you lose your momentum, it's really hard to get it back," Schneider said. "Now we have it back."

The momentum has been building since the team beat University of North Texas 93-86 last Saturday, along with a 73-71 thriller over University of California, Irvine on Thursday.

The win over UC Irvine snapped a four-game home losing streak and featured a running jumper by Wozniak with only five seconds left to give the Mustangs the game.

Mayes and Beeson played strong again for the Mustangs scoring 16 and 11 respectively.

Puerto Madero defeats Silver Charm to win Donn Handicap

HALLANDALE, Fla. (AP) — Puerto Madero, a Chilean horse who has been in the United States less than a year, charged to the front entering the homestretch to upset the hard-charging Silver Charm in the $500,000 Donn Handicap.

Puerto Madero, the 7-2 second choice, overtook dueling leaders Sir Bear and Littlebitlively on the final turn and pulled away down the stretch to win by 2 and 1/4-lengths over Behrens.

Silver Charm, whose odds fell to 4-5 by post time, couldn't overcome the outside post position in the 12-horse field and needed a fast charge to finish third by a nose in front of Hanarsaan.

The result marked only the second time in 21 starts that Silver Charm had not finished first or second. The other came in last July's San Diego Handicap, when he finished last in a field of five.

"It's a heck of a lot more than disappointing," Silver Charm owner Bob Lewis said.

The result dealt Silver Charm a setback in his quest to become thoroughbred racing's first $10 million horse. The $50,000 share still moved Silver Charm past Alysheba into third place all-time with $6,683,006.

Puerto Madero won for the 11th time in 16 career starts.

forfeit.

"He (Cowell) said we matched up good with Fresno, and if I'd just go out there it would be better than a forfeit," Apodaca said. "I'd either win, or lose by a little bit, but I'd only give them three points instead of six."

With the score 17-14 going into the final match, the pressure was on Strange to score a victory for the Mustangs. It looked like he was going to do just that until Demers got three points for an escape takedown with only seconds remaining, winning by one point and tying Cal Poly.

"I'm upset that we ended up tying the match," Cowell said. "It's one that we should have won. We had the chance to win it. Mark Apodaca came out and did a good job for us, everything else went perfect. Steve (Strange) did exactly what he had to do except finish off the last nine seconds."

Although the Mustangs didn't get the win, Cowell believes the team wrestled well.

"We wrestled pretty well tonight as a team," he said. "We did what we had to do. Haymon and Gross wrestled really well. Gan did what he had to do to win the match. It was a pretty good night. Fresno wrestled really well; they had a good match tonight."

The Mustangs' next home match is against Cal State Bakersfield on Feb. 12 in Mott Gym at 7 p.m.

BRIEFS

The men's tennis team opened its season Friday defeating Westmont College 7-0.

The Mustangs won all but one match in straight sets against the Warriors.

The Mustangs No. 1, Tony Picuta, lost 6-3 in the first set but rallied to win the second set 6-2 and won the third set when Westmont's Brian Kettler had to retire due to injury.

No. 2 Brett Masi and No. 3 Brandon Fallon both won their matches 6-0, 6-0.

Cal Poly will travel to No. 7 Pepperdine on Saturday.

The Cal Poly men's basketball team extended its winning streak to three games with a commanding 101-81 victory in Mott Gym Saturday over California State University, Fullerton.

"It was a good win, and I thought we played well on both sides of the ball," head coach Jeff Schneider said. "I was really pleased with our effort."

The Mustangs had six players score in double figures while holding the Titans to a .424 shooting percentage.

Cal Poly (9-10, 4-4) shot 3-pointers from all over the court making 14 of 30 attempts for a .467 percentage. Guard Mike Wozniak led the Mustangs with 21 points, 18 coming from behind the 3-point arc.

"I think we're playing our best basketball in the league anyway," Schneider said. "We're getting good point guard play, Wozniak is shooting it, we're getting a double-double from the 3-spot, we're getting a double-double from the 4-spot and Chris (Bjorklund) is throwing in about 15 to 16 points a game."

The Mustangs were set to defend one of the Big West's premiere players, like Harmon, but Harmon picked up three fouls only three minutes into the game forcing him to sit out the rest of the half.

"It really hurt them especially against us because (Harmon's) a guy who put up 26 points against us last year," Schneider said. "We tried to guard him with quicker players because he goes right around all big guys."

Schneider recognized that Harmon had been called for two early fouls, so he called a time-out on the next possession and set up a play to attack him, eventually drawing Harmon's third foul.

"We went right at him and Jeremiah (Mayes) was able to pick up his third on (Harmon)," Schneider said. "Our guys executed perfectly."

The Mustangs owned the Titans (9-9, 3-5) on the boards, out-rebounding the Titans 40-35, with 28 of those being defensive rebounds. Cal Poly is now 6-0 when out-rebounding its opponent.

Cal Poly's front court dominated the Cal State Fullerton forwards, led by Mayes' 17 points and Brandon Beeson's 14. For Mayes, it was his second consecutive double-double (10 rebounds) and for Beeson it was his

Poly wrestlers tie Fresno State, 17-17

By Jen Stevenson
Mustang Daily

The Cal Poly wrestling team tied long-time rival Fresno State 17-17 Friday night, after an upsetting turnaround in the last nine seconds of the match kept the Mustangs from winning.

In the deciding match, Cal Poly freshman Steve Strange (165 lbs.) was up 11-9 with nine seconds on the clock. Then, the Bulldogs' Matt Demers pulled a surprising turnaround move to put Fresno State in the lead 12-11 as the final buzzer sounded.

"I'm disappointed that we tied. A tie is like a loss. I don't think we wrestled as good as we are."

— Cedric Haymon
freshman wrestler

A stunned Strange was visibly upset and the team visibly deflated.

"I'm disappointed that we tied," freshman Cedric Haymon said. "A tie is like a loss. I don't think we wrestled as good as we are."

The Mustangs (7-5-1) started the night well. They took three of the first four matches, which gave Cal Poly a comfortable 11-3 lead.

Wells (174 lbs.), ranked tenth nationally in his weight class, wrestled with his usual flair. He swept the first match 15-0 against Dan Jackson.

Joey Hart (184 lbs.) widened the lead to 8-0 with a win over Fresno State's Michael Mellor. Mike French faltered at the 197-pound level, allowing the Bulldogs to get on the board, but Gan McGee regained the Mustangs' momentum with a win in the heavyweight division.

Fresno State (2-4-1) managed to tie Cal Poly 11-11 after Mustang losses by Jaime Garza (125 lbs.) and Alberto Garza (133 lbs.). But the Mustangs pulled ahead again with wins by James Gross (141 lbs.) and Haymon (149 lbs.).

"Everybody looked good," Wells said. "We looked in shape. Everybody wrestled really good up to the end."

Surprisingly, freshman Mark Apodaca wrestled in the 157-pound weight class, despite a bad shoulder that will require surgery. Apodaca was off the mats last weekend, forcing the Mustangs to forfeit at that weight level.

"I asked him to wrestle one more match," head coach Lennis Cowell said. "This was an important one, and he did everything he had to do."

Apodaca put up a good fight against Tim Cornish, despite worries about his shoulder's ability to hold up. He lost 10-4, but spared the team a
